Romero's Dawn of the Dead is really the zombie movie to watch if you want to get really pissed off and frustrated. It's the most gory film ever made. Featuring zombies in various states of decay, flesh falling from bones, teeth falling out, guts spilling out, gaping wounds, as well as plenty of zombies decapitated or having their heads literally blow apart, you'll need to have strong stomachs to watch it. I must say I was a bit skeptical when I first saw the trailer on IMDB, but then again, a zombie movie that gave me the creeps as a kid and was also kind of fun has a good chance of being a good zombie movie. Then I read the commentary on IMDB, which is my favorite. [See more] Netflix and Hulu are streaming this film, so you can easily watch it on your computer or smart TV. If you want to watch on your mobile device, you can download it from the Apple Store or the Google Play store. The film premiered in the U.S. as part of the Sundance Film Festival. The story is about a group of people who take refuge in a shopping mall in a city overrun by zombies. One of the characters is a priest who has a contact with some outside help. It was Romero's last film. One thing I love about this film is that it features a really great script, lots of good character development, and Romero as the director. This is definitely a zombie movie for all ages. It was a huge success at the box office and was nominated for several awards. It's a classic. I would suggest that you watch this film.
