**Adobe Fireworks:** This specialized and easy-to-use program is best for creating web graphics for the Web. Its purpose is to create and edit graphics in both vector and raster modes. Fireworks enables you to use sophisticated drawing tools, as well as take advantage of its grid system and color palette to quickly create images. Fireworks lacks an image-editing capability, but it does include a number of color-matching tools that can be used with any other Photoshop elements. Adobe has a free application called Dreamweaver, which is a popular web design application that can be used to create and edit Web graphics as well as HTML coding. Another Adobe tool, the Adobe InDesign application, also enables you to design and create a number of publishing and print graphics. You can create, edit, and print in your own publishing software, such as Adobe Acrobat, or print through your laser printer. ## Creating Vector Images Pixels and rasters are fundamentally different in that the pixels are made up of dots of varying sizes and colors. Vector images are made up of lines, shapes, and fills that are made up of geometric outlines of flat lines, circles, and polygons. It's easy to see the difference between a pixel image and a vector image. Figure 8-6 shows an example. Photoshop is best suited for creating raster images because it offers a wide variety of edit options. However, vector images can be created in Photoshop. This enables you to easily manipulate drawings in terms of color, size, and line quality. Before you learn about vector-image creation, it's necessary to understand how vector graphics are best created.

Epidemiology of childhood eye injuries. The purpose of this article is to critically review the published literature on the epidemiology of childhood eye injuries. Non-traumatic ocular injuries occur in children at all ages, although they are most common among children who are younger than 3 years old. Most eye injuries in children are more likely to be associated with ocular problems such as poor vision, ametropia, and strabismus. Preventative efforts to decrease the incidence of childhood eye injuries center on promotion of safe play and early detection of ocular abnormalities, as well as education of parents on how to prevent eye injuries. Most eye injuries among children can be prevented by promoting safe play, strengthening parental supervision, and educating parents regarding eye safety practices.

Childbearing What is childbearing? Childbearing is when a woman has a period and gives birth to a baby. Before that period happens the woman is a man-child and after that period she is a woman-child. A man may have a few sperm. We call this a semen count. A woman may have a small amount of different types of cell that are called eggs. We call this the egg count. A woman has her monthly period when she ovulates. A woman has a monthly period when she is not pregnant. A woman has two monthly periods when she is pregnant and her baby is not growing inside of her yet. A woman is not pregnant when she has regular ovulation like she does on day 1 of her menstrual cycle. She is not pregnant when she has no ovulation like she does on day 14. So the stages of childbearing are: This childbearing is when a baby is growing inside a woman. This childbearing is when a baby is growing inside of a woman.
