You can host a total of 16 cute sheep on your desktop which can be moved around (and can be made to walk on any Explorer window) or dropped from any height using the cursor The sheep behavior is "randomly generated", so don't be surprised if some sheep decide to either eat a flower or take a flaming dive in a bathtub From the app's Options section, you can add new pets, enable or disable the sounds, as well as choose the total number of sheep in your virtual flock Warning: don't library for Android/iOS apps? I see that in iOS an app can be made to run on multiple devices via a shared library, but is there an equivalent for Android? Is it possible to build a single app that will run on multiple devices? A: An internal (android:sharedUserId) library is used to share common code between applications. So basically, each application can refer to the same code in its own library (internal). This is done by using the android:sharedUserId attribute in the library's manifest. There is no equivalent for iOS since there's only one main application. 1d6a3396d6

Server 2012 R2 The cover, with its lovely shade of grey and red, has been one of my favorite pieces of art for a long time, so when I saw it getting remastered in the new trailer for TMNT, I jumped at the chance to buy it for myself. But I had no idea it would also come with a replica set of Leonardo's hand and feet, complete with protective rubber gloves. That was not the only surprise, though: the gloves also come with a set of Turtle Gloves, which don't seem like they'd be a lot of fun, but I found them to be surprisingly practical, despite being a bit, er, dirty. The Leonardo's gloves are a set of thin rubber gloves that fit over your own hands, so you can handle the replica and keep your hands clean, while the Turtle Gloves are a pair of leather gloves you slip your hands into when playing with your Leonardo, which give them a Turtle-like feel. They're a bit flimsy, so you can't really slide your hands in or out of them, but they fit snugly enough that they shouldn't fall off and I was able to pull them off and put them on my own hands with a minimal amount of effort. Overall, I don't mind having a limited set of rubber gloves, since they're good for more than just painting with them. I have the opportunity to use them in a number of ways, from painting to holding small sculptures, so it's nice to have them available to me. The replica set is made by TotoroMedia, and is available for $80. Folk rock, it's the name of the game, if you're gonna pick up something in the music category. This particular album has all that and more, it's got two versions of 'Still Holding On' to go along with 'Light at the End of the Tunnel' and of course 'Just for Tonight.' It's pretty much impossible to go wrong with these guys. I've been keeping their stuff on repeat for a while now and I'm very grateful to them for continuing to make songs for people to enjoy. The album is due out on CD on October 30th, so be sure to pick it up! Datsik has been busy this year, as he dropped a new music video for "Kamikaze" featuring vocals from The Weeknd. The song is
