Time.04.03.11.20.20.Dr Ed Molyneux, Director of Research, South Africa's National Health Laboratory Service, said earlier this year: "If you are using the street price of a drug in calculating the amount your drug benefit should cover, then you are missing part of the point of being able to pay for medicines on the basis of their cost." The findings of the study came with South Africa's National Department of Health (NDoH) looking to increase the use of the country's Drugs Benefit system, which currently covers about 16% of the population. Medicines that are funded through the benefit programme are aimed at the poorest South Africans, costing about R400 per month for the average household, although the NDoH calculates that the programme will save South Africa an estimated R21.8 billion over 10 years, should all households be covered. The study found that in the rural areas of KwaZulu-Natal, most drugs in the benefit programme were costing an estimated R237 per household per month, compared with an estimated R117.53 per household per month in the Johannesburg and Pretoria metropolitan areas. This discrepancy is explained by the fact that in the rural areas, the state-run health system provides less service compared with South Africa's private health care sector. Annual donations The study also found that the amount the state health authorities give as donations to the private sector to fund outpatient drugs is estimated to cost the national health system R9.1 million, on average, per year, “almost double the estimated societal cost of providing pharmaceuticals to the poorest 25% of the population”. The researchers concluded that: “The level of over-payments is such that the national taxpayer is subsidising 85% of the cost of prescriptions.” Dr Molyneux further said that the quality of healthcare services provided by the state health services could be enhanced with more support for the private sector to help fund healthcare in the

The enchanting Mystic Vale fuses diverse genres, pushing their boundaries to create a new, original, artistic form of music. After a successful independently released debut in 2013, Mystic Vale is thrilled to announce the release of their debut EP, ‘Seasons Over’ on March 27, 2017. The EP comprises seven tracks of fresh, electrifying sound that depicts a vision of an ethereal beauty. Mystic Vale’s music unfolds in the tension of an imagined impossible world, but without the hustle of a conveyance. Each track builds on the last, propelled by the listener. ‘Seasons Over’ is a representation of the year’s natural elements: winter, spring, summer, fall, night, day, slow and fast. Like the seasons, Mystic Vale’s album explores many facets of life that can often be forgotten in the hustle and bustle of modern day society. But it continues to be the undoubted harbinger of the emotional intensity “we often carry” that can only be discovered in an intimate, calm environment. ‘Seasons Over’ is a form of introspection we can’t get enough of, as it demonstrates the momentary connection we have with the world around us. We can’t say where the inspiration came from, as that is merely an abstract concept of the album’s sound. But as they say, music is about “feeling, not knowledge”^[7]. And Mystic Vale is all about what we feel through the way we connect with one another. ‘Seasons Over’ is a special project, as it is partially produced by the two band members. Joanna, on lead vocals, and Ian on vocals and guitar, also worked with the sound and production of this EP. The sound engineering was also performed by our very own master of the sound, Aspen Lille, who is also a guitarist in the band.â€ â€The EP is something we have tried to create for a while,â€ Joanna explained, â€but we never seemed to find the right space to do it right. We even asked Ian to remix our track [â€Sell Your Soul,â€] but I think our style 3e33713323
