“We’ve implemented a ‘safe zone’ inside the ball, in which the user will be able to see how his player progresses during the game,” says Oleg Trilimanov, senior gameplay engineer at EA Canada. “We’re also moving away from the attribute-based rewards that we’ve seen in FIFA. We’ve reduced the amount of dice roll-based effects in the game, as they felt out of place in a game like FIFA. Players will have more control over how they perform in gameplay, with the skills they earn.” Trilimanov says that EA is taking the time to get the controls right in FIFA 22 before expanding the feature set, and the game is still in an early phase of development. FIFA 22 will release worldwide on October 2 for PS4, Xbox One, and PC, with the Nintendo Switch and Xbox 360 versions arriving in November.

Q: How to assert that private method is called I have two classes A and B. Class B contains a private method private String privateMethod () { //some code } I want to check that B class called method privateMethod() A class public class A { private String message = ""; public void setMessage(String message) { this.message = message; } public String getMessage() { return message; } } B class public class B { private A a = null; public void call() { a.setMessage("Hello"); } } Test case: public class TestCase { @Test public void call() { B b = new B(); assertEquals("Hello", b.getMessage()); } } If A class private setMessage() method called I do not want to use assertTrue on this variable. I want to just assert that method has been called A: Use PowerMockito @Test public void call() {
