Hilariar polyps and giant hepatic hydrocystomas. A review of the literature yielded 11 other reports in which a parallelism has been demonstrated between the development of cystic hepatic lesions and the presence of Hilariosis. The present case, also, has been observed in an apparently normal dog, despite the presence of an Omeyers' syndrome. Therefore, the mechanism of this association is not merely due to the inflammatory response of the hepatic parenchyma secondary to the parasitic infection. The mechanism by which the dog, in a 2nd live, developed this association, has not yet been clarified. Hepatic cystic degeneration has been reported only in case of parasitosis, but that does not rule out the possible role of some unknown pathogenetic factors also present in the dog of the present report.
