Refrain from. The US company that relies on the popular iPhone game Pokemon Go to track its phone users' movements has been forced to ban the game due to the serious privacy implications. In a statement, Niantic said that it had pulled Pokemon Go from Google Play and Apple's App Store due to concerns over the way it collects information. The company said it had received over 70,000 messages from concerned users, and more than 800,000 from angry governments and users in the Philippines alone.
Since launching in July, it has hit a peak of 20 million downloads. "Niantic and Nintendo worked hard to make sure Pokémon GO
