The built-in camera and its support for the Apple Camera Connection Kit enables iPad users to shoot and edit photos just as easily as they would on their iPhones. The 5 megapixel camera on the iPad 2 also features a high-quality lens and a standard 28mm lens (both fixed focal length lenses). Users can save photos and videos directly to the iPad's 16 or 32 GB of storage capacity, and they can be e-mailed to others through the built-in e-mail capability as well as the mail app on the iPod touch. The iPad also has the Internet apps that the iPhone does such as Flickr (Figure 12-14, left), Facebook, and YouTube, as well as a slew of other photo sharing apps, including Flickr, Picasa, and Google+ (discussed in Chapter 13). Figure 12-14. The iPad is ready for action shots. The built-in camera on the iPad 2 can shoot in high quality, and it can also be used as a flash for portrait shots. Also note that the lens for the iPad's camera is interchangeable with most DSLR lenses, as well as a 28mm, 60mm, and 105mm lens. The iPad was envisioned as a mobile Internet device and can browse the Web and check e-mail, but it does lack the benefits of web browsing that a desktop computer has. The iPad's smaller screen size and touchscreen make it much more difficult for web browsing than what's available on a laptop or desktop computer. However, this doesn't mean that the iPad can't work as a simple media viewer. It's perfect for Facebook, Twitter, and other social networks, as well as streaming video. In addition to web browsing, the iPhone-like interface also enables users to edit images with some of the same photo-editing tools as a computer. While Adobe Photoshop, Apple iPhoto, and Adobe Lightroom do feature on the iPad as well as on the iPhone, Apple iMovie, which is a basic video editing app, is the only multimedia-specific app available for the iPad. # _Adobe Photoshop Elements_

Q: How to set up a signalr chat application in Azure I have been given the task of building a SignalR chat application. I have been reading that Azure is the most used platform for SignalR, but having a hard time finding any examples or how to articles on how to set this up on the cloud. If anyone knows of a good tutorial that covers this or can point me in the direction of one, I would be grateful A: SignalR is a very powerful tool, and Azure is a great place to host SignalR. However, having a multi-tenant service might be a problem. Another option is to host your SignalR instance in-house, and send the messages over MSMQ or something similar.
