The present invention relates to image forming apparatuses, and more particularly to a technique for correcting an image that is recorded on an image recording medium having a plurality of media of different sizes. Description of the Related Art Printer systems have been developed in which, in the case where an image is formed on paper (printing paper) having a plurality of media sizes, in order to output an image, either the media size is determined and the image is formed on an image forming medium, or the image size is set based on the size of the media and the image is formed at the image size.

As a result, when the image is formed on the image forming medium, the image can be recorded without problems even if the media sizes differ. In addition, a printer system has been proposed that can correct the size of an image on a medium in a case where a paper of a new size or a changed size is used for forming the image. In this type of printer system, the printing paper is detected by a paper feeding device, and the paper size is determined. The size of the image is corrected based on the determined size of the paper. After the size of the image is corrected, print data is generated, and printing is performed. However, in the above conventional printer system, the media size is determined based on a predetermined medium
