Included in all Editions: Autodesk® AutoCAD® 2014 software, AutoCAD LT™ software and Autodesk® Revit® software. FEATURES. The play he made when Chicago handed him the ball in the end zone at the end of Sunday's win over the Eagles was just one play, but the play sealed his first NFL touchdown. In the eighth quarter with the Bears trailing 17-3, the Eagles defender who was covering Jordan Howard broke up a pass intended for Howard in the end zone. It's an almost impossible play for a running back to make, but Howard broke a tackle from the defender and cut in, running 15 yards and making the catch at the 1-yard line. "I was just hoping to get the ball," Howard said. "I try to put my head down and just keep running like I always do." Howard had lost a fumble on the previous carry and he knew he had to come up big at the end of the game for the Bears to stay alive. "I just knew once I got it in my hands I had to make a play," he said. The Bears head to Tampa to take on the Bucs next Sunday, but it's doubtful that Howard will have to try the end zone again against the league's best defense. Donald Trump's legal advisers are weighing the chance of an attack on Robert Mueller and the deputy attorney general Rod Rosenstein because they failed to respond adequately to his firing of James Comey, one of his lawyers told the Associated Press. The revelation on Wednesday that Trump's plan was under consideration came as the New York Times reported that Trump had asked associates to find out whether his hand-picked attorney general, William Barr, would declare that the president was too much of a target of the special counsel's investigation to sit for a formal interview. Adam Waldman, a lawyer who is working with the president on questions about the Russia investigation, told the AP: "We are now examining the situation to make sure everything is done properly and is done by the book." Some lawyers in Washington suggested there was little chance of the president's legal team mounting an attack on Mueller's investigation into possible Russian collusion with Trump's 2016 election d0c515b9f4
