along with Nokia's signature aluminum ring. The front panel is not home to a display. Nokia has gone for a secondary 5.2-inch AMOLED display, placed just below the screen, with standard features like Gorilla Glass 5. It comes with an Always On display and brightness that can be adjusted to 18 levels.

The Nokia 6 has three cameras on the rear. The primary camera, which has a 12MP sensor with a f/1.8 lens, can record videos at 1080p, but it can also record 4K videos. We will check out the camera features of the Nokia 6 as soon as we get a review unit. The secondary camera is an 8MP unit with an f/2.2 aperture. You can capture images with a resolution of 2,560 x 1,440 pixels at 16:9 aspect ratio. The depth of field can be adjusted by going into the camera settings. The third camera, on the front, is a 5MP unit with an f/2.0 aperture and a 120-degree wide-angle lens. It can record HD videos at 720p, but it can also record 4K videos.
