“The core of the gameplay is deep,” said Andrew McKenna, FIFA’s Senior Director of Pro, esports and cover athlete development. “We’ve taken all of what we’ve learned from the development of the 2013 FIFA World Cup and put it into the gameplay.” “We’ve heard from fans across the world that the AI in FIFA was a lot more ‘human’ and responsive in FIFA 17 and we wanted to take that a step further,” said Brian Bliss, the Executive Producer of the FIFA series. “The result is a game where players are more dynamic than ever before, but still react to their teammates and opponents. FIFA 22 will come with three different motion-capture-powered game modes, in addition to the online features that have been a staple of the series for years. FIFA Ultimate Team will also get a major overhaul in FIFA 22, with new cards, packs, and items that utilize the data collected from players’ sprints, acceleration, and tackles. The implementation of real-life players will be used to drive FIFA Ultimate Team’s gameplay to a new level. “FIFA Ultimate Team will enable players to build and dominate their squads from the ground up,” said David Rutter, executive producer of FIFA Ultimate Team. “FUT will place players in squads (which can be composed of FUT players or FUT legends) and then you can put these players together to create the ultimate FUT team. This revolutionary feature will be at the heart of FIFA for many years to come.” World Class Motion Capture The game will boast real-time motion-capture animation, which will be taken from a live football match using real people playing in the actual game. During gameplay, the player’s sprint, acceleration, and tackling animations are taken directly from the real player actions. Players will feel more connected to the actual world, as if they are playing at a live game. “FIFA combines the smoothness of real-time cutscenes, the beauty of real-time hand-drawn animation, and the realism of authentic player models and gameplay,” said Nathan Sharp, Head of Animation at EA Canada. Nathan Sharp was the

Head of Character Animation for FIFA 17 and FUT 17. He moved on to EA Canada and worked on developing the game's interactive animation
