A highly fluorescent chromium-ion-labeled gelator was synthesized by combining 3-aminopropionic acid (APA) and 1,3,4,6-tetra(2-bromo-2-methylpropoxy)pyridinium dibromide (QBr) using a peptide template. The X-ray diffraction study revealed that the compound had an irregular ribbon-shaped structure. A chromium-labeled gel formed with a combination of APA and QBr showed a clear gel texture, whereas no gel was formed with APA or QBr by themselves. The solid state fluorescence of the chromium-labeled gelator was significantly higher than that of APA, indicating that the chromium(III)-labeled gelator is a useful fluorescence probe. Spinal compression fractures in pregnancy: sonography and MRI. To evaluate the use of sonography and magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) in the diagnosis of spinal compression fractures in pregnant patients. Forty-six pregnant women with a chief complaint of back pain were enrolled in the study. Sonography and MRI were performed to evaluate compression fractures of the thoracic and lumbar spine. The rate of positive diagnosis was 86.7% (41 of 46) on MRI, 95.7% (43 of 45) on transverse T2-weighted images, 100% (7 of 7) on sagittal T2-weighted images and 100% (7 of 7) on axial T2-weighted images. Sonography showed the rate of positive diagnosis to be 50% (23 of 46) for sagittal images and 20.9% (10 of 48) for axial images. In pregnant patients, MRI, especially T2-weighted axial images, is useful for diagnosing compressive fractures in the thoracic and lumbar spine. 'use strict'; var $export = require('./_export');

I'm a 1st year PhD student. I would like to ask what are the things that I should know while studying this field. Also, what should I learn. I've already read the literature of this field and would like to enrich my knowledge, but I don't want to make my masters thesis worthless. A: This is a bit of a broad question, but I'd think about these general things: How good is the literature in this field? That is, is there a lot of interesting stuff out there? In which way is the existing theory/research on this problem interesting? On which questions can you "push the research" somehow? Do you have the right tools? If not, how can you get them? What are the questions that matter to you? Which questions are worth to you? Also, I'd suggest that you listen to what the other people in your group have to say. It's very likely that they have a lot of experience and expertise on this topic. Let us imagine that a massive asteroid is headed directly for the Earth at 10km/s. Which would be the best way to deflect this course? If you said "Do nothing",
