Adobe Photoshop CS6 is not your mother's art program Adobe is a well-known name in the software industry for developing and supporting creative and business software, including graphic design and drafting programs, and virtual prototyping tools. Photoshop is Adobe's flagship photo editing program. Photoshop CS6 is not your mother's art program. In fact, it's the first "full-featured imaging platform" to be released from the company and it brings a number of new features to the table. Photoshop CS6 is the latest version of Adobe Photoshop, a popular photo-editing application and one of the most popular programs available. Adobe claims that you should try Photoshop CS6 for free for 60 days—called the "Early Adopter Program" — but then must register for the software to download it. This should be considered a work in progress article and should not be read as any sort of definitive list of all the features in CS6. As such, these are some of the features that are likely to be implemented in the final release, but which are not available in the beta versions of CS6 available for download. However, all the features listed below are currently available in the beta versions of Photoshop CS6, which are available for download.

1. New Plugins
The new CS6 enables plug-ins, a means of extending Photoshop's functionality by installing special programs that use hidden code (extensions) to perform Photoshop functions. Plug-ins can be either purchased or free. Adobe's first set of CS6 Photoshop plugins are called GoLive, a tool for retouching and repair, and RetouchXtreme, a tool for touchup and manipulation of color. Adobe also added an upgrade to Image Ready Pro 7 as well as updates to Adobe Fireworks, their most recent piece of software for creating and enhancing vector graphics.
3. Filters
Adobe says filters are a big new feature to Photoshop and one of the top productivity features they are excited about. Filters are applied to images and can be used to add or soften features, alter colors and change texture. Photoshop's filters are similar to the ones in Gimp, the free open-source image editor.
4. Camera Raw
Photoshop CS6 will bring a new Adobe Camera Raw editing experience with a unified interface for both RAW and JPEG images. In addition, Adobe has announced that some Adobe Creative Suite

Chronic HCV infection is the most common blood-borne infection in the United States, and the leading cause of chronic liver disease, cirrhosis, and hepatocellular carcinoma. An estimated 3-4 million people are chronically infected with HCV, and around twenty percent of these people (660,000) are co-infected with HIV. In the United States, the most common mode of HCV transmission is injection drug use, and there is some evidence suggesting that HCV infection may be more common among HIV-positive persons than among HIV-negative persons. HCV infection also is a risk factor for acute hepatitis E, a mild, self-limiting hepatitis that causes 80,000-100,000 infections per year in most parts of the world. For a detailed review, see, Tyagi, S., et al., Hepatitis C Virus. In: Viral Hepatitis, Vol. 2: Current Perspective on Prevention and Treatment, S. N. Mongkolsapaya and G. Sharkey (eds.), San Diego, Calif.: Academic Press, Inc. 1998, pp. 133-154. HCV is a single-stranded, positive-sense, enveloped RNA virus that belongs to the Hepacivirus genus in the Flaviviridae family. The HCV genome is approximately 9.6 Kb long and consists of a single open reading frame (ORF) encoding a single, long polyprotein of about 3000 amino acids. The polyprotein is co- and post-translationally processed by cellular and viral proteinases to give rise to the structural and non-structural (NS) proteins. The 5' N-terminal portion of the ORF encodes 05a79cecff

Bulgarian President Georgi Parvanov attended the euro area summit in Bratislava, Slovakia. Photo: BGNES Bulgaria's president has come out in support of Bratislava's anti-migrant stance and said: "I was happy to see that no one was prepared to compromise with democracy." Bulgaria's President Georgi Parvanov, who attended the Bratislava summit on Monday, supported the stance taken by Slovakia's Prime Minister Robert Fico who earlier had said that if it comes to a choice between migrants and the state, the latter would be the most deserving. Parvanov referred to the protests at Bratislava's main train station on Saturday. "I understand people's indignation. You were right to protest, you were justified. But do it without violence and you will receive support from me," the Bulgarian President said, referring to the black-clad protesters who had occupied the premises of the main train station and blocked the approaches to the European Union offices as they demanded the closure of the border with Serbia. "I understand anger and the desire to stand for democracy. But can you fight against the government and the state? This doesn't work and does not lead to anything good. The government is a legitimate representative of the people. Do you want to see the situation in Slovakia, or Poland? Do you want to see these two leaders being attacked? Don't you think that this should concern us all?" the Bulgarian President said. Parvanov also said the EU's situation is quite different from the one when he was still in power. In fact, he pointed out, there was already a country which claimed to be part of the EU but which was not taken into account on account of political decisions. "One can see that there were opinions about certain countries that were not based on anything. Who remembers the Soviet Union? We do not even mention it anymore. I want to tell you that the situation in the EU today is very different from what it was 10 years ago. I hope that my country [Bulgaria] will be recognized in the EU soon and that we will move along the way the European Union is moving," Parvanov said. "I believe that the actions that Slovakia has taken are correct," he added. This was Parvanov's first official visit to Bratislava, where the "zero tolerance" stance of the Slovakian authorities
